Thank you for your prayers for our family and ministry.

Late Wednesday afternoon we had an appointment with the oncologist and the results of the biopsy confirm that the cancer has spread to her liver. She is now being scheduled to have a new port placed to be able to begin both chemotherapy and immunotherapy treatments. They are going to run further tests on the tissue from her liver biopsy to see about another treatment they may be able to use also. All of her doctors have been very caring, but also upfront with us of the seriousness of this type of cancer. If she responds well to these treatments her prognosis is years, and remission is possible. If she does not respond well the prognosis is months. As Pam has given testimony of faith in the Lord through all of this, the doctor acknowledged that God is the only one that knows the true prognosis.

We know you have been praying with us, and we ask you to please continue. Pam told our family and the church last night not to give up as the Lord can and will still work and be glorified in this. Her witness and faithfulness has been a testimony of the goodness of God to everyone she is around,
